

HARVARD COLLEGE

Dean of Students Office

FIRST-YEAR EXPERIENCE

July 2019

Dear Members of the Class of 2023:

Welcome to Harvard College! Let me introduce myself: I am the Resident Dean of First-Year Students responsible for Crimson Yard, which consists of Greenough, Hurlbut, Pennypacker, and Wigglesworth dormitories. I will serve as your academic and residential dean this year. This means that I am available to help you and your immediate advisers (proctors, academic advisers, coaches, peer advising fellows, professors, etc.) sort out any academic or residential questions that may arise during your first year at Harvard.

The rest of the staff here at the College and I are very much looking forward to your arrival. This event marks an important transition for you and all your classmates. In addition to embarking on an interesting and challenging course of study, you will be living in a unique and exciting residential community. As a full-fledged member of this community, you will also be responsible for your own choices and actions in ways that may be simultaneously exciting and daunting. Keep in mind that all incoming students are likely to experience challenges and setbacks as they transition to college. Please know that with some effort and resourcefulness you will be able to effectively manage these new situations. Resourcefulness, I think, has two important components: (1) thinking creatively rather than solely relying on tactics and strategies that worked in the past, and (2) reaching out proactively to your mentors and supports here at Harvard for consultation and advice.

To that end, you have been assigned to one of the resident proctors in Crimson Yard. Harvard proctors are graduate students and University administrators who live in the dorms with you and conduct advising sessions on academic, personal, and residential matters. They are friendly and knowledgeable adults whom I encourage you to get to know well. Their primary role, along with your peer advisers, is to help create a warm and welcoming home for you this upcoming year.

Of course, your classmates and roommates will likely play an even more significant part in your first-year experience. Harvard College believes strongly in the educational impact of our residential community, which is largely why I and the other Resident Deans of First-Year Students have spent the summer carefully creating suites and entryways that will reflect the remarkable diversity and strengths of the Class of 2023. Please recognize the importance of arriving with an open mind and a willingness to cooperate with all the people you will meet. They, like you, are talented and remarkable and will contribute greatly to the quality of your experience at Harvard.

Thank you for keeping all of this in mind as you complete your arrival plans. You should have received your room assignment and, if applicable, the names of your roommates. Feel free to reach out to your new roommates now, and you will have ample time to get to know your entryway mates very soon.

Finally, while a big part of my role is administrative, what I enjoy the most about my work is getting to know the first-year students. Even if you don't have an issue that needs sorting out, I encourage you to reach out and introduce yourself. You can easily find me in my office at 6 Prescott Street, and please say hello if you see me eating in Annenberg!

Once again, welcome, and best wishes for a rewarding and productive year.

Sincerely,

Dwight Fee
